From the Pastor: Monday, September 19, is the feast day of St. Januarius also known as San Genarro. He was the Bishop of Benevento and was martyred near Naples in the year 305. Every year, on his feast day and at other times, a vial containing some of his dried blood liquefies. There have been times when his blood remained dry and this is usually a sign that some disaster will occur during the next year such as disease or war. An example would be when the blood failed to liquefy in 1939, the year World War II began. I hope to have good news to report next week. Friday, September 23, is the Frast Day of St. Pio of Pietrelcina, popularly known as Padre Pio. He is a contemporary of many of us having died in 1968. His story began to spread in this country when servicemen returned home from World War II. They brought stories of this Franciscan monk stationed at San Giovanni Rotundo in Italy. He who bore the stigmata, or the wounds of the crucified Christ, on his body and spent long hours in the confessional. He was known to have the ability to read souls; that is, to know whether anyone going to confession was making a full and complete confession. There are also accounts of him by-locating (being in two different places at the same time), levitating or healing someone by his touch. These are great miracles but what is most important is the example of humility that he gave. He was under investigation by the Vatican (on at least two occasions), he complied with the orders of by his superiors to cease contact with the faithful. When he was allowed to return to public ministry, the miracles resumed. Through his obedience, Padre Pio demonstrated that his works gave glory to God and not to himself.
