A Reflection for All Saints & All Souls Days

"The poor missionaries left their homes and were driven from their country; they came into the new settlements, strangers among strangers, without any churches or congregations or friends, looked upon with suspicion by the people and hampered and persecuted by the laws; but they held their ground, performed a noble work in guarding the infant church and building up what is now the mightiest of religious structures in America. May the church never forget her founders, —the poor, scattered Catholics, and the daring, persevering missionaries. They lived, labored, and died for the faith. All honor to them, and may God increase their reward for all the ages of eternity. How much we have! How little we do! How little they had; yet what wonders did they not accomplish."

-John Timon Reily
